SOCIAL JUSTICE & DIVERSITY GRADUATE RESEARCH FELLOWS

Are you a graduate student pursuing research related to issues of social justice and diversity? Looking to gain practical research skills, network with others and get published?

Who is eligible?
Any master’s or doctoral student at William & Mary interested in pursuing relevant research may apply. We welcome applications from schools and departments across campus.

Questions?
Contact Natoya Haskins, Assistant Professor of Counselor Education, at nhhaskins@wm.edu.

What’s involved?
Fellows will:
• Join a three- to five-person research team under the guidance of a faculty or post-doc mentor to support their individual research projects
• Attend four brown bag sessions related to research and manuscript writing
• Gain practical skills and support while developing and publishing research in the areas of social justice and diversity
• Receive funding toward conference registration to present research

Learn more and apply online: education.wm.edu/sjdfellows