TIP OF THE WEEK

“Decolonization is not a single event or prescribed blueprint but a complex and contested process of unlearning and undoing centuries of colonial ideas, desires, and infrastructures.” Therefore, it cannot be expected that we will find immediate solutions, but instead we should take steps towards unpacking the messy and unsettling impact of colonization on our systems. This must begin with open and honest dialogue. — Adapted from Sharon Stein and Why We Need to Talk about the Decolonization of Higher Education.
