TIP OF THE WEEK

A shared language assures that we are referring to the same issues when we use the same terms. It is the platform on which equity work stands. Too often work around equity gets detoured because we are using the same terms with one another but meaning different things. The results can be confusion and misunderstanding – which, at its worst, erodes results and trust.

Faculty, staff, and students, please join us in developing our shared language regarding diversity, equity, inclusion and social justice.
