Gain the skills and knowledge to make a deep impact on families and communities. The M.Ed. in Clinical Mental Health with a concentration in Couples, Marriage and Family Counseling prepares students to become both marriage and family therapists and licensed professional counselors. The program provides a broad foundation in mental health counseling with special attention to working with intimate partners and families.

FAST FACTS

- Designed for: People interested in becoming licensed professional counselors and marriage and family therapists
- Prerequisite: Bachelor’s degree
- Requirements: Full-time, on-campus program
- Entry term: Fall
- Fieldwork: 150-hour practicum and 600-hour internship
- Accreditation: Accredited by the Council for Accreditation of Counseling and Related Educational Programs (CACREP)

FIELD EXPERIENCES

Students are well-prepared to become licensed counselors and marriage and family therapists through coursework and clinical training opportunities provided throughout the program. In the first year, students have their first client contact through a closely supervised 150-hour practicum. In the second year, two 300-hour internships provide for intensive counseling experience with couples and families.

Family counseling interns provide their counseling services at the William & Mary School of Education’s Flanagan Counselor Education Clinic through the New Horizons Family Counseling Center. The center has offered free counseling services for more than three decades and serves approximately 300 families per year. Students have invaluable opportunities for leadership, clinical training and research experiences — all while providing an extraordinary service to the community.

COURSE TOPICS INCLUDE:

- Techniques of individual and group counseling
- Professional, ethical and legal issues
- Family development and processes
- Multi-cultural counseling
- Marriage and family counseling
- Practicum in counseling
- Couples counseling
- Addictions and family systems
- Psychopathology
- Substance abuse and society
- Advanced theories of family counseling

WHY W&M?
Looking to pursue a graduate degree in education? Here are a few reasons to consider W&M:

A welcoming and supportive community
The School of Education is big enough to offer a diverse range of programs, people and experiences, but small enough to feel like family. You’ll make close connections with your fellow students and your professors — relationships that will stay with you for life and help you forge your own career path.

A focus on leadership in education
Our programs produce leaders — people with the passion, skills and tenacity to effect change in education. Our alumni achieve early recognition, becoming school leaders and innovators.

A campus in the heart of historic Williamsburg
Founded in 1693, W&M is a campus that offers years of history and countless beloved traditions.

Professors who are leaders in the field
Our faculty are recognized and respected around the world for instruction and research. They’re passionate about their own research as well as the success of their students — they are, after all, teachers first and foremost.

Field experiences that will change your life
You won’t be stuck in lectures and you won’t have to wait until after graduation to begin making a difference in the lives of students and communities. Opportunities abound to pursue meaningful, fulfilling experiences that allow students to both learn and contribute.

Programs for students at every career stage
Our graduate programs are designed to meet the needs of a diverse student population that includes full-time and part-time students, people re-entering the paid work force after raising a family, and recent recipients of bachelor’s or master’s degrees preparing for advanced positions in the field of education.
